LEMAN—BRAND.

The Case Submitted to the Governor by the Canvassing Board Without Recommendation.

A Net Being Swiftly and Surely Woven About the King's Fraudulent Tools.

The Grand Committee at Work—Over the Ballot-Box—The Democratic Scheme.

AT SPRINGFIELD.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 27.—[Special.]—The State Canvassing Board met at 2 o'clock this afternoon, all present, and in addition Gov. John R. Tanner, Chas Stuntz, Albert Campbell, Charles S. Irving, W. H. Wells, and a number of other Democrats and Republicans. Governor Tanner said the business was the consideration of the returns of the counties from Cook County for Sheriff at the last election. If any one desired to offer any statement or so to submit a report to the Board an opportunity would be given. Mr. Irving asked:

"Is any evidence"

There was no response, and Governor Tanner wrote a report to the Board.

Being interrogated then, he answered, in part, as one of the statements he found, when according to the returns, but a majority of the votes in that Democratic district. The question at the board would understand that an affidavit might appear for certain purposes without giving jurisdiction, either of the subject-matter or of the person. The apparent illegality in proceedings against the proof of the board to hear and evidence as to the marking error then to ascertain the returns as presented to them by the Board of Canvassers of Cook County. The difficult question that right to diligently inquire into and determine whether the returns presented to them were genuine, or whether they had been produced by fraud, but when the board had done that they had exercised their full power. The position was that the board was a creature of the statute; that its duties were ministerial, and, in the language of the Supreme Court, "mechanical"; that they had no power to look behind or inquire on any other evidence, except simply for the purpose of determining whether the returns presented to them were the returns from Cook County. Of course he must presume that the board would act in accordance with the law; that frauds or errors had been found, or at least statements made, by the board to warrant to say that he had evidence and desire the case further. He then said to refuse him a reasonable time would make a gross fault near his duty, would, in his attorney's judgment, be exceeding the power granted the board by the statute. It be understood the proceedings were the object of the counties, this board appointed as a canvassing board for the purpose of determining whether the statements received by the counties from the various precincts were correct, and when correct ascertaining the result. The statutes required that they should meet at the office of the County Clerk of Cook County, and that the Governor of the State should be notified of the time and place of meeting. The statutes required that the Governor should issue certificates of election to the persons who should appear to have been elected by the greatest number of votes. The statutes required that the Governor should issue certificates of election to the persons who should appear to have been elected by the greatest number of votes. THE BOARD'S REPORT.

A Letter to the Governor Setting Out the Case with Its Attendant's Action.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 27.—[Special.]—On the day meeting to canvass the returns of the Governor sent the following:

"SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 27, 1896.—To his Excellency, John M. Palmer, Governor of the State of Illinois: Sir: We, the undersigned, Secretary of State, Auditor of Public Accounts, State Treasurer, and Attorney-General of the State of Illinois, required by law to canvass the votes given for Representatives to Congress, Judge of the Supreme Court, Clerks of the Supreme Court, Judges of the Circuit Court, Senators and Representatives to the General Assembly, and members of the State Board of Equalization, respectively, at the election held in said State on the 4th day of November, A. D. 1896, to hereby respectively make and present this special report thereon to your Excellency:

"First—In regard to canvassing and returns of votes at precincts made to us by the boards of canvassers, of the respective counties in said State, when the Sixth Senatorial District of Cook County was called on the return for State Senator to said district, objection was made to the counting by us of the returns so furnished by the Cook County Board of Canvassers of the vote canvassing or given for Harry B. Leman and Raleigh Brand for State Senator from said Sixth District of Cook County. At the same time this objection was made a statement was presented and filed with us, of which the following is a copy:

"STATE OF ILLINOIS, County of Cook, ss.: We, members of the Cook County Board of Canvassers, said court to be Dr. Justus Hurtz, one of the Cook County Board of Canvassers, which statement was publicly subscribed by him on by Mr. Justice Easton, the other Justice duly called by the County Clerk of Cook County, to meet him in canvassing the vote of said Cook County, to wit, canvass it appeared that persons had been before said Cook County Board of Canvassers and offered to prove that the returns of the vote cast for Senator in the Second District of the Eighteenth Ward of the City of Chicago, a portion of the said Sixth Senatorial District, there had the first and second returns of the vote cast at the said election to said ward for the office of State Senator, for that the poll-book presenting said returns and containing a part thereof had been brought by unauthorized persons after the same had been signed and sworn to by the judges of election to said precinct, and that by reason thereof the said returns were not entitled to be received and counted, and that they would be able to prove that the said poll-book was not the same poll-book that was signed and sworn to by the judges of election, and that the said poll-book was changed and altered after the same had been signed and sworn to by the judges of election, and that the said poll-book was not the same poll-book that was FORCED AWAY.

A Strange Advice and Stranger Story of Fanny Kemps, an Englishman.

New York, Oct. 31.—[Special.]—Fanny Kemps, a tall, well-dressed, refined-looking Englishman, was brought into the Jefferson Market Police Court today. Charles Gregory of the Great Central Hotel and Justice Duffy knew that Mr. Kemps became a guest of the hotel yesterday. Soon after he was assigned to a room he began to walk about the hallways and attract considerable attention because of his extraordinary actions and wordy behavior. He had evidently been out, and after considerable coaxing he went into his room and was induced to lie down on the bed. Then he began to talk about his experiences in Australia, and said that he was a prominent lawyer in Sydney. He had considerable money with him, and after a while he began to tell about the beautiful women he had met in Australia, and how he had been offered a fortune if he would marry a certain woman. He said that he was afraid to go out on the streets, as he had been followed by a number of people, of whom the following represent the chief:

Two men who came down to the room. These men he said, were sent after him by a lord. Then I met a man who said he was a lawyer, and he said that he had a case against me. He said that I had better go with him to a certain police precinct. He said that he was a personal friend of the Prince of Wales, and that he was instrumental in the first place in bringing me to this country. He then said that I had better go with him to the police station, and that he would explain matters there. I refused to go with him, and he then said that he would have me arrested. He then said that he was a personal friend of Lord Rosebery, and that he was instrumental Payne was brought into court under a heavy guard of soldiers, and was closely watched by a number of deputy sheriffs. The defendant was represented by Attorneys Jones and Campbell, while the state was represented by Attorneys Hackney and Hoch. The first witness called was Mrs. Brady, who identified the body of her husband. She was followed by several witnesses, who testified to the killing of Brady. The defense then announced that they would not introduce any testimony, and the case was submitted to the jury. The jury was out but a few minutes when they returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree, and fixed the punishment at imprisonment for life in the penitentiary. AN ECCENTRIC MAN'S WILL.

Litigation at Vincennes, Ind., Over the Large Estate of William J. Wise.

Vincennes, Ind., Nov. 28.—[Special.]—The Knox Circuit court has been engaged all day on the settlement of the most remarkable will probably that has ever been offered for probate in this county. It is one of the largest and most complicated wills in Southern Indiana. The present litigation is between the heirs of the deceased, and the defendants are William B. Wise, John H. Wise, Elizabeth Wise, Mary Wise, Kate Wise, Lizzie G. Wise, Charles Day, Mary Day, Mary Burton, Emma Burton, and A. J. Williams, executors under the will executed by W. J. Wise, in August, 1894. The plaintiff, Henry S. Wise, brother of deceased, is a farmer in the adjoining township, living in the suburbs, and is 60 years of age. The defendants are the brothers and sisters of the deceased, with the exception of Elizabeth Wise, who is dead, and the executors. The will was executed with full legal formalities, and was witnessed by Dr. Spencer Wise, a brother of deceased, and Judge Thomas Wise, a cousin of deceased, both of whom are dead. The will was executed on the 15th day of August, 1894, and the testator died on the 17th day of the same month. The will was contested on the ground that the testator was of unsound mind and memory at the time of the execution of the will. The will was executed in the presence of the witnesses, and was signed by the testator in the presence of the witnesses

Cast Out the Orphans.
Chicago, Nov. 26.—[Editor of The Inter Ocean:] In a city paper I find the following, which will explain itself:
[Here follows a letter, Nov. 25, by the Superintendent of the Home for the Friendless, announcing that the Home will be closed for the present, and that the inmates will be sent to their friends, or to the Cook County Poor-house.]
This is as it should be. Now one's own child or to a Christian and such and care for the comforts of the poor! The Superintendent says the Home will be closed for the present, and I should guess that against there is room enough in the poor-house for the inmates. They will also proceed to enforce the rule without regard to the convenience of the city. The work has gotten its second wind, the wind has gotten to the end of the rope, and the end has gotten to heaven.

Lowering the Cost of Production.

When prices of products have a downward tendency, two means may be used to avert a shrinkage in profits. One is to lessen the cost of producing the products before the conditions of causing the products before the conditions. The other, to diminish the cost of producing the products before the conditions of causing the products before the conditions. Both methods are used in selling, but a great extent, is a question, however, of profit to the farmer with an increasing area or analysis of the cost of production. Any operating that there is no profit in growing three or several crops, it will not be easier to see how the cost of production may be lessened. It is possible that no increased saving of labor in conducting the soil for the seed may add to the yield. Careful study of the best methods of cultivating crops would not only serve to lessen the expense of work, but might lead to greater yields per acre. Again, by applying how to increase the yield per acre of land should not be the farmers. By a system of judicious selection and manure and care, from the very birth, several and has all being beans, tuber bearing, or grow earlier maturing and heavier grain than is now the case, no matter how good that may be. There is no end to progress in that direction.

The means of preparing the soil for sowing may not be again the subject of Bulb Bulletin 1 is a digest of a number of experiments that the Alabama and Tuskegee Farms must be done for losses and the agricultural plants. Cotton Seed Meal.

Cotton seed meal is one of the most valuable of the nitrogenous fertilizers. It is a by-product of the cotton seed oil industry, and is produced in large quantities in the cotton growing states. It is a valuable source of nitrogen, and is also rich in phosphoric acid and potash. It is a valuable fertilizer for all crops, but is especially valuable for cotton, corn, and other crops which require a large amount of nitrogen. "WEEK WAY"

The New Lecture of Col. Ingersoll, Delivered at Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 25.

His Reasons for Insisting that the Churches Have Failed to Civilize the World.

Comparisons Between Pious Morality and That of the Bible-Theology Pronounced a Failure.

KANSAS CITY, MO., Nov. 25.—Col. Robert G. Ingersoll delivered his lecture entitled "Week Way" at the Coates Opera-House to a full audience this evening, as follows:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: I would not under no circumstances like to take myself out of this world, the great questions now agitating the minds of the thoughtful people, to-day and to-morrow, have and will be answered. How shall we govern ourselves, the family, property, and especially the family, and the relations between husband and wife, between parents and children, and children and parents, and between neighbors? What is the problem, How can this be done? The question is not, How can the rich and poor meet? but, How can we take care of one another? (Laughter.) The question is not, What will we do to some other world? We will have quite too we get there before we ask that. (Laughter.) The business we will now attend to is, How are we to civilize the world? What should we do? What ought we to do? What ought we to do, what ought we to accomplish, what would look best if I could, what form would our ideal ought to be done?

THE CHURCH AND CIVILIZATION.

In the first place I am sent for by the theological world. Have I the right to inquire? What authority has a corpse for the salvation of the world, but not while you are in the world—afterwards. (Laughter and applause.) They could take on a kind of grim—a kind of faith—a kind of—and they could act as though we were nothing, nothing at all, and they could go on their way, and we could go on our way. (Laughter.)

I want to know what to do here. Have I the right to inquire? Yes. If I have the right to inquire, have I have the right to investigate, have I have the right to investigate? I have the right to investigate. If I have the right to answer, have I the right to answer? I have the right to answer. And when religion comes into contact with my reason, with my conception of facts, with my judgment of common sense, millions of men have been enslaving to govern the world by means of the supernatural. Thousands and thousands of churches exist, thousands of cathedrals, monasteries, convents, hospitals, asylums, and when has been the result to this world? Has not the world been governed with another? Does the religion of our country have any respect for that of another? Is there any such religion known to us who only exist and does not the great of every religion, each talking, considers the religion of all others a damned fact?

THE CHURCH AND CIVILIZATION.

Why is it that the churches have failed to civilize this world? Why is it that the Christian countries are no better than other countries? Why is it that Christians have been as cruel as other men? Why is it that churches, or members of churches, or ministers of churches (laughter and applause), have been a curse to the world? Why is it that the greatest of the world, the greatest of the world, the greatest of the world,

MONETARY.

Clearings at the principal cities of the United States yesterday and a week ago were:

New York
Boston
Chicago
St. Louis
Cincinnati
San Francisco

Trade was very dull and quiet in financial circles in this city yesterday, but in spite of the holiday not a pessimist could be found looking for hard times in the near future with hopeful. Many of them have told to the writer what is here brought to the experience of reaping good profits here and do not mind any temporary decline in prices. Reports are frequent of investments of subscribers in various parts of the country. The New York Evening Post says: "It is not that there is a speculative demand for various kinds of securities, but the general body of capitalists, who, in short, exert all the decisive control over the course of prices, feel a good deal confidence who are surrounded with their average income before their there is absolutely a possibility of much less, and, on the contrary, the chances of a fair profit in the course of a few months." Quite an amount of money that has been lying idle for a good while has recently been employed in this way for a short time, and the bulk of the investments are considered by their holders as permanent. Of late, many of the corporations which have been borrowing from the banks have been paying off their loans, and the banks are consequently left with a large surplus of funds on hand. The managers of the banks are anxious to find employment for this money, and are willing to make concessions in the rates of interest in order to secure it. Many of the corporations whose securities are dealt in on the Stock Exchange have been paying off their floating debts, and are now in a position to borrow money on their bonds for the purpose of making permanent improvements. Many of the railroads are in this position, and the bulk of the business done in bonds on the Stock Exchange is in railroad securities. Many of the railroads are also in a position to borrow money on their bonds for the purpose of making permanent improvements. Many of the railroads are also in a position to borrow money on their bonds for the purpose of making permanent improvements.

There was a good demand for investment securities, but brokers complained that the supply in this market was small and that there were few sellers. This is true not only of local bonds, but of desirable railroad securities. One broker's statement is that the old holders have either sold out or are holding for still higher prices, and, of their borrowed, the securities have gone from. Among the sales over the counter were $5,000 United States coupons 4s at 127½, $5,000 at 127¾, $5,000 Cook County 6s at 104½, and $5,000 City Railway 6s at 97½. At the Chicago Stock Exchange were sold $5,000 Galveston Terminus 6s at 101, $10,000 Board of Trade 6s at 104½, $5,000 Chicago, Pacific & Western 6s at 97½, $5,000 at 97¾, $5,000 Commercial 6s at 104¾, $5,000 West Division Railway 6s at 101, $5,000 Chicago & Evanston 6s at 101, $5,000 Kansas Pacific 6s at 97½, $5,000 Chicago & Iowa 6s at 97½, $5,000 Chicago & Southern 6s at 97½, and $5,000 Union Pacific, Denver & Gulf 6s at 97½.

The leading London market was more active yesterday than a week after a holiday, and of the trading ruling ruled not to the fact that there is no market to a business basis. The transaction that stands here, though here the more being an English account in Wales and gold here has been imported.

Consols were quiet and the rate advice much changed in prices. They opened lower than on the last advices that kept on the Stock Exchange here, improved later on having others from the country, probably induced by an example of Prussians. There were sales for gold, but no gain in advance sufficient to switch the interest, and then the market left here. The rupee to shipments was light, and the stock market generally here. [A Disagreement with a Commercial Traveler.]

Some five or six years ago my father and I lived in San Francisco, neither of us then dreaming what fortune's future it had in store for each of us. My only brother was engaged as a bookkeeper in that city (he was last married to the daughter of an old New England family), and my mother and only sister having died when I was a small child, there were only father and I together. But father and I were quite enough for each other, for never were two people happier in each other's society than I and my "chum," as I fondly called him. Where we were I know, we were comfortable.

One dreadful day my father was suddenly taken down with a fever, and after a short illness died. I was somewhere near the end of my second year of knickerbocker life, and I was left to battle with the world alone. But, for a time I was not quite aware of my loneliness, for I was too busy and anxious to see that I was left to think and act for myself.

We had settlements to the 1st of December, for I was only a fifth-clerk, and not rather big pay, when I received a letter from my father's employers, informing me that my services would be dispensed with after the 1st of December. This was a terrible blow to me, for I had no money to speak of, and I knew that I must look for employment at once. I had a few friends in the city, but I knew that they were in the same position as myself, and could not help me. I had a few acquaintances, but I knew that they were not the kind of people I cared to associate with, and I therefore did not call upon them. I had a few letters of introduction, but I knew that they were of no use to me, as I had no money to buy clothes with, and I knew that I could not present myself in the shabby garments I had worn for the last month. I had a few articles of jewelry, which I had received as presents from my father, and I resolved to pawn them, and with the money thus obtained purchase a few clothes, and then look for employment. I was quite successful in my search, and obtained a situation as clerk in a large wholesale dry goods house, at a salary of $15 per month. I was very much pleased with my success, and thought myself very fortunate in obtaining a situation so soon after my misfortune, and I resolved to do my best to please my employers, and to work my way up in the world. I was very much surprised at the amount of business done by the house, and I found that I had my hands full to keep up with it. I was kept at work from 8 o'clock in the morning until 6 o'clock in the evening, and frequently later, and I found that I had very little time to myself. I was very much pleased with my employers, and I found that they were pleased with me, for I received a raise of salary at the end of the first month, and I was told that if I continued to please them I should receive another raise at the end of the second month. I was very much pleased at this, and I worked harder than ever to please my employers. I succeeded in pleasing them, for I received another raise at the end of the second month, and I was told that I was getting along very well indeed
